INTRODUCTORY

We take pleasure in presenting this, our fifth issue of the Glendale City Directory.

The Householders Guide, the first section of the Directory shows an increase of sixteen pages over last year—a truly remarkable building record.

The Classified Section, the third division of the Directory, is a complete catalogue of the city's professions and business enterprises and shows the public where to buy and says in plain black type: "Buy It in Glendale."

POPULATION

There are 22,818 names of adults in the Directory proper.

This total does not include the name of the wife, as her name appears in parenthesis after her husband's.

To account for the wives, also children under eighteen years of age, who are not listed, we use a multiple of 2½.

In towns where there is a big percentage of workmen unmarried, a multiple of 2¼, sometimes even 2 is used.

We have come to the conclusion that a multiple of 2½ would give a better estimate of GLENDALE'S population, being as it is a city of homes, than 2¼ formerly used.

Therefore, we find the population estimated, as above, to be 57,045.

As the population of Glendale in 1920 as given out by the U. S. Census Bureau was 13,536 this is a growth of 43,509 or 321 per cent in five years.

Yours very truly,

GLENDALE DIRECTORY CO.

which gained 394% population in ten years and is still gaining at the same rate, is called the "Fastest Growing City in America". It is seven miles north of Los Angeles. The new Pacific Electric Rapid Transit tunnel places down-town Los Angeles only 25 minutes from Glendale. Mountains rise on all sides of the city, giving it a picturesque setting. To the north and east stretches the fertile San Fernando Valley. Its views are inspiring, its climate excellent and the energy of its leading men is remarkable. Glendale's population is estimated at 60,000 and the assessed property valuation is $47,910,335. It has nine banks with thirteen million dollars in deposits and thirty-eight millions of clearings. One hundred and ten productive industries, an excellent school system and fine office buildings. A new high school costing $1,200,000 was built in 1924 and $1,250,000 is now being spent for new and better grade school buildings. The school system has 322 instructors and is most modern in every particular. During the fiscal year 1924-1925, the gain in school registration alone was over 1000 pupils. Building permits have aggregated over ten million dollars in each of the two past years.

In 1924 23.78 miles of streets were improved at a total cost of $1,705,505. Ornamental street lighting costing over $200,000 has been installed on Glendale and Central avenues and other main thoroughfares. Glendale's exceptionally wide, straight business streets are one of the city's outstanding characteristics. Brand Boulevard is one of the widest and handsomest business streets in America with a superb view of the San Gabriel range.

A sewer bond issue of $1,500,000 was passed some time ago and the work is practically now completed, giving Glendale a splendid modern sewer system connecting Glendale with the Los Angeles outfall sewer to the ocean.

The Security Trust & Savings Bank last year built a six-story office building costing $600,500 and three new theatres have been opened during the past year while several additional large down-town office buildings will be started soon. Ground is being broken for a new Y. M. C. A. building to cost $275,000. Transportation by Pacific Electric, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Glendale & Montrose Railway, and automobile service is excellent.
